The Hunt Institute is committed to making its collections accessible for research. We are pleased to offer this digitized item.

Usage guidelines
We have provided this low-resolution, digitized version for research purposes. To inquire about publishing any images from this item, please contact the Institute.

About the Institute
The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library’s activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.
Me trompé-je mon bon ami, nemi avec vous pour dire que des plantes sertiées étaient originaire d'Amérique et qu'il n'y aurait pas en Europe un arbre ou une figue d'Amerique.

Le buis noir, par exemple, n'est distingué entre les autres mouches desquelles est dans l'Amérique.

Sur que toute la plante noir nous avons d'apartenez qu'à l'Amérique pendant un ton sur 10.

Donfous, Setef, réponse par la petite poste.
An (manuscript)

J. n. (unreadable)

Paris

Le Ministre de l'Instruction de la République française, une et indivisible

Pans, le

3 Octobre