About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

Hon. Frederick V. Coville,

Botanist U.S. Dept. Agr.,

Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Coville:

Since writing you last December I have removed to this place where my mother has my children.

Your letter of Dec. 21st '96, suggested that possibly you should be able to avail yourself of my services in the field for a time about June 30th. I should very much like to do something for you this summer as I will not be in school work again till fall. I would like to engage with you permanently
if I could be of use to you.

Very respectfully your obedient servant

(over) Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation

Mr. Coville:

Is there a copy of your Death Valley report and Frank Tweedys Yellowstone report available? I am very much interested in the Biological Survey.

Very respectfully

F. J. Baird
