About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

Citoyen et cher compatriote je n'ai point de graines fraîches de tulipier. je vous en offrirais avec beaucoup de plaisir s'il m'étoit possible de m'en procurer. je crois que le C^{te} Michaux en aura apportée d'Amérique; sa collection de graines est sauvée du naufrage, ~~je suis sûr~~ vous pourrez en avoir à son arrivée. si je puis en trouver ^{" avant l'hiver "} je vous les enverrai avec bien de l'impression. agréz les sentiments d'estime et d'attachement sincères avec les quels je
