About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

Mr. Huntsman made be so good as attend to what is stated below.

Edinburgh Dec. 31. 1828-

Dear Sir

I have much pleasure in being able to say that your Journal of Nat. Hist. has been improving down to the very last number - and I shall be glad to learn it has succeeded sufficiently well to induce you to continue it. I shall think of some other article for you before long -

You was good enough to send me the 1st & 2^d nos. the 3^d & 4th.
I have not received - but if you were to request Messrs Longman to send the copies you design for me along with their consignment to Mr. Black their agent here, I sh^d receive it just.

really - as I get many of my foreign books through black.

I am

Dear Sir

Yours truly

R. K. Greville

To y^r. Hortus Britannicus not yet - I presume Messrs Longman will present one with a copy.
