About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

Again thanking you, in anticipation, for the report.

I have the honor to be

Sir,

Your obedient servant

Percy Groom

F. V. Coville, Esq.

7, Polstead Road.

Oxford.

England.

Sept. 4. 1895.

Dear Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from your department, and to express my thanks for the courteous promise that a copy of the Report of the Death Valley Expedition 1891 should be forwarded to me.

I have not yet received the report and therefore fear that its dispatch has been overlooked.
