About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

My Dear Sir

Many many thanks for your most interesting letter. & am glad to hear you are all so well Mr Egerton who has been in Mexico for 6 years making Drawings has been with me a few days & I showed him your letter. He brought all his books of sketches most interesting & a fine view of the Mountain he accompanied Papocatepetl. He returns to town in Dec^r hope to introduce him to you He belongs to the Suffolk St Gallery

He is a very interesting person. Mr. Hwang says is to be here next week & I shall send to Bath for him to come again to meet him
Do tell me what is become of Mr. Macdonald & hope Mrs Macdonald is well No news I can tell you but speculation from Geneva

To excuse a longer Letter.

yours sincerely
