About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

My dear Sir,

The Gardener's Magazine will be published in future, monthly, at 1/6; and I intend to send it to you regularly along with the Architectural Magazine. If you think it worthwhile to send Fair's Edinburgh Magazine for the Gard. Mag., in the same manner that you send Johnstone's Ed. Magazine for the Magazine of Architecture, I shall be very happy to make the exchange. I will also speak to Messrs Longman in favor of keeping a standing advertisement of Fair in the G. M. as we intend to do of Johnstone's in the A. M. — On the supposition that this ^{arrangement} will be agreeable to you.

I remain

My dear Sir,
(My wife & sister joining in compl.)
Yours very sincerely

J. C. London.
