About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

Mr. H. E. Thompson

Dear Sir,

Your apprehension is correct.
The Eastern Apple tree
lives much longer than the Apple tree
in the west.

I am sorry for the oversight, — but I suppose you have learned, as I have,
that we all need
friendly watching. In my part I am always thankful for such oversight.

I am not hurry-ing with these M.S. B.
as I understood from your last letter it is

Not needed, - but I have all (the little)
I found needed for F.
Should it be desired
G. will require more addition from the last few letters.

Sincerely,

Thomas Meehan
