About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

Dr. R. Ellis Thompson

Dear Sir,

I have been away till recently and now am glad to see by the above from an English paper, that the first vol. of the Supplement has appeared. If not asking too much I would like a copy, also of any vol. which may have appeared since you sent me those on my first engagement.

When do you wish me to go on again with more Mss. ? It will be as well to leave it as long as may be safe without knowing, as there is so much novelty continually being developed about American affairs.

If there is anything coming to me beyond what you have sent to me, it will be acceptable.

Very truly yours

Frederick Brehm

I have not yet found a publisher for the continuation of my Flowers & Fruits of the U.S.
- 2, with a Vol. of that ready for the press, I have time this winter for other work if desirable.
