About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

Prof. Frederick V. Coville Washington.

Dear Sir,

In answer to your honoured letter of Dec. 18th 1894 I beg to inform you that I am publishing my Potamogetones Suecici reviccati in three parts. The price of the first two fasciculi is fixed to £2 ^{or cash} here in Stockholm. As to the price of the third fasciculus, which partly will be a sort of a supplement, it is not yet determined, but at any rate will not be beyond £2.

As soon as I receive your order, and you a copy of the first fasciculus; the second one will appear in the midst of this year's summer

I am, dear Sir,

yours very truly

Gustaf Tiselius
