About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

Report

Disposal

Mr Frederick V. Coville.

Botanist Dept. of Agriculture
Washington D.C.

Dear Sir: Today I
mail two packages of botanical specimens collected in this vicinity this season. Many of them are duplicates of specimens formerly sent to you. Since June I have been busy with other matters and have done
but little collecting.

There are several public documents that I would be glad to receive
"Contributions to U.S. Herbarium"
Vol 4 Bot of the Death Valley Expedition.

Also "Bullitions of Agrostology"

No. 17 Am Grasses II and No 18
