About the Institute

The Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation, a research division of Carnegie Mellon University, specializes in the history of botany and all aspects of plant science and serves the international scientific community through research and documentation. To this end, the Institute acquires and maintains authoritative collections of books, plant images, manuscripts, portraits and data files, and provides publications and other modes of information service. The Institute meets the reference needs of botanists, biologists, historians, conservationists, librarians, bibliographers and the public at large, especially those concerned with any aspect of the North American flora.

Hunt Institute was dedicated in 1961 as the Rachel McMasters Miller Hunt Botanical Library, an international center for bibliographical research and service in the interests of botany and horticulture, as well as a center for the study of all aspects of the history of the plant sciences. By 1971 the Library's activities had so diversified that the name was changed to Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation. Growth in collections and research projects led to the establishment of four programmatic departments: Archives, Art, Bibliography and the Library.

My dear Frazer

I have learnt so many interesting facts
in botany from you
that I am sending me
of the first copies of the 2nd Edition of the
"Apothecaries' Garden"
hoping that you will do it the honour to accept it -

Yours sincerely
J. D. Dewar

have them at hand some day - for this Political - sermonical
bearing of what you say seems to me
of considerable importance.

It was a pity it rained so - on the 4th -

We have been spending the bank holiday at the Botanical for Regent's Park - the rocky island was looking better than we have ever seen it -

Please don't answer
Soet Thine
F. D. Darwin
